Part Three: Read the articles about three sports players in Britain and then answer the questions A, B or C.

LIAM

I started playing badminton for fun in the garden with my sisters when I was four. Then I had tennis lessons and forgot all about badminton until I was 11. I changed schools then and my new sports teacher got me interested again. I've already won two national competitions in my age group and I came third in an international one in Holland last month. I've just added another eight hours to my competition training timetable so I might win next time!

ADE

We only play football at school and I wanted to try another kind of sport, so I looked online for information. I found a hockey club near my home and they've been fantastic. My dad was on the university hockey team and is still at that level, so he helps me too. I'd like to improve and play more matches, but I'll never be good enough for the national team.

JOSEPH

Last year I entered table tennis competitions in France and Spain, but I didn't win anything. I've hurt my arm so I'm having a break from playing at the moment. That means I need to keep fit by running instead. My dream is to be in our national team when I'm older. Nobody in my family has ever played table tennis, but my parents and uncle are fans now and they follow it on the internet.
